Making a lasting impression in science through communication – "Assessment Center" and "Practice Lab"

TARGET GROUP	Postdocs
TARGET	In this workshop, you are invited to test your own skills and knowledge in experiential processes. The focus lies on performance, delivery and effective messaging of scientific presentations. You will gain access to the approach of storytelling by designing an enticing storyline of your project and to deliver a speech in an effective way.
TOPICS	This "practice lab" is designed to improve the individual performance of giving convincing scientific presentations. It focusses on testing your skills in order to develop your individual style and provides a minimum of necessary theoretical input. Active discussion and exercises to try a new behavior and test different skills will be encouraged. These skills will support you to achieve an outstanding performance. Content: • Storyboard – breaking down complex content to a simple form • The impact of body language and use of voice • Connection to the audience and management of the audience • Training of spontaneous and flexible behavior
